

Success Story Engineer Mohyiddin Al-Shboul

Congratulation to Engineer Mohyiddin Al-Shboul on the PMP Certificate and PMI's accreditation as "Professional Project Manager"!

Engineer Shboul worked as Water Projects Manager with Abu Dhabi Water & Electricity Authority / Al-Ain Distribution Company, where he was superintending a number of several-hundred-million-dollar projects.

Currently, he works as Manager of the Millennium Challenge Unit in the Premiership in the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan that runs the Millennium Challenge Program in the Kingdom where he oversees a number of several-hundred-million-dollar projects.

Engineer Shboul is married and has five kids some of whom have graduated from the university, while others are in their final education stages. Work harsh conditions and the numerous family obligations have not prevented Engineer Shboul from pursuing his goal, i.e., obtaining the International Certificate.

A funny gesture that Engineer Shboul makes about the phase he was preparing for the PMP exam is that his kids' care and follow-up on the issue and their warning him of any decline or idleness since he is their model and that there is no room for failure.

The achievement of Engineer Al-Shboul is deemed to be a real success story to reflect on by each student who uses abundance of work, family responsibilities or age as justifications. Through determination to go on in the pursuit of obtaining the accreditation certificate, Eng. Shboul sets an example for those who wish to seek and obtain eminence.

Once again, I congratulate Engineer Shboul and hope that his success will motivate many students to prepare themselves in utmost seriousness to the PMP exam.
